Sterling Hits Record Low on Arab Move

LONDON, Dec. 10 (IHT) .-The pound sterling fell to record lows against other currencies today, reaching so low a rate against the dollar that the Bank of England intervened to support the British currency.

The main reason was a report, later confirmed, that Saudi Arabia no longer wants pounds in payment for oil and that Arab states generally have ended investment in U.K. Treasury bills. Story Page 9.

On Renegotiation Terms

EEC, Britain Reach An Accord at Summit

By James Goldsborough

PARIS, Dec. 11 (THT),-The nine members of the European Economic Community agreed late tonight on a formula that satisfied British demands for a renegotiation of its EEC membership treaty.

Shortly before midnight, after a day of difficult negotiations at the EEC summit meeting. French President Valéry Giscard d'Estaing told the press that a compromise agreement had reached.

"We have asked the Council of Ministers and the (European) Commission to draw up a plan as soon as possible for corrective mechanisms that would avoid unacceptable conditions arising for Britain or any other member of the community," he said.

By accepting that wording. Prime Minister Harold Wilson pledged himself to campaign to keep Britain in the community. In a speech in London last weekend, Mr. Wilson said that if he got the terms he wanted, he would recommend to the British people, prior to a national vote on continued membership, that Britain remain in the community. The vote is to be held before

A Hard Stand

The compromise was slow in coming today. Before the com-promise was worked out, the French had taken a hard stand against what was seen as a British attempt to change community rules, and the French stand had brought an angry response from Mr. Wilson.

Addressing Mr. Giscard d'Estaing, the British Prime Minister dent, is to be the definitive view of the community, then I see no hope whatsoever of successful negotiation."

The renegotiation issue involved not so much the money that Britain contributes to the community's budget as Mr. Wilson's need for something positive to present to the British people as an improvement over the membership treaty negotiated by the previous Conservative government in Brit-

Today's agreement will allow him to call it renegotiation, but Giscard d'Estaing thought

"Mr. Wilson said he didn't want renegotiation either of the Treaty of Rome or of Britain's membership treaty, but rather a revision of the terms of the accord," Mr. Giscard d'Estaing said tonight.

Mr. Wilson came here arguing that Britain will be paying too much to the EEC budget by 1980. when its transitory period of membership is over. The figures show that by then Britain, with 14 per cent of the community's total of gross national products. will be paying 22 per cent of its budget.

The heart of Britain's renegotiation plan is to have budgetary contributions based on gross na-tional products, which London calculates would save Britain up to $500 million 2 year by 1980. The community's budget this year was about $5 billion and by 1970 is expected to be $8 billion.

Basing contributions on GNP. however, would violate one of the community's sacred principles, that of "community preference." This holds that members should give preference to trade with each other, and that payments to the much they import from outside the EEC.

Under the present system, all duties on imported goods and levies on imported food are paid by members to the community. The more a member imports from outside, the more he pays to the

Rockefeller Nomination Wins Approval, 90-7, in the Senate

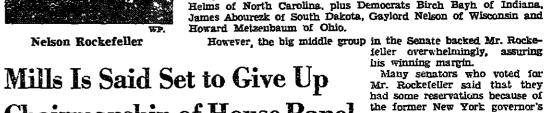

By Spencer Rich

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10 (WP).-The Senate approved the nomination of Nelson Rockefeller to be the nation's 41st vice-president by a vote of 90 to 7 today.

The action now moves to the House, where the Judiciary Commintee is expected to approve the nomination this week, with the full House voting next week. Both chambers must approve it under the Constitution's 25th Amendment.

Pinal confirmation of Mr. Rockefeller will mean that for the first time in U.S. history neither the president nor the vice-president reached their offices by the election process.

Those senators voting against the nomination were Republicans Barry Goldwater of Arizona, William Scott of Virginia and Jesse Helms of North Carolina, plus Democrats Birch Bayh of Indiana,

Congress still in session when it expired, Mr. Ford would be forced to send it back if he wished to veto it. This would give Congress a chance to override the veto. If Congress were out of session when the 10-day period expired, he could kill it simply by failing to sign it and an attempt by Congress to override his veto would not be possible.

The bill does not take a direct position on whether the tapes and documents legally belong to Mr. Nixon. It leaves that up to the courts to decide if Mr. Nixon should choose to bring a suit declaring he was deprived of his property. However, the bill does say that if a court finds that it deprives a person of private property rights, appropriation of funds for compensation is authorized.

A second bill affecting Mr. Nixon won partial Senate approval yesterday. It provides $200,000 in pensions and staff aid for the former president, in place of the $850,000 originally asked for by the Ford administration.

SALISBURY, Rhodesia, Dec. 10 (Reuters).—More talks between Rhodesian African nationalist groups and the government were forecast here today by the African National Council's secretarygeneral, Gordon Chavunduka

He was speaking after returning from the Zambian capital, Lusaka, where he was a member of the ANC delegation at talks on the Rhodesian constitutional problem. The government rejected the Africans' stand at the talks.

Mr. Chavunduka rejected the claim of Ian Smith, the when pressing things could have kept him at home," Mr. Chavunduka said. Mr. Smith had pinned much of the blame for the collapse of the latest constitutional talks on the Tanzanian leader and on "extremist elements" among black Rhodesian nationalists. In a television interview made public in a broadcast here today. Mr. Smith also said that he could not predict if there was going to be any progress toward a settlement over the next year. 'And if there isn't, I am happy to go on the way we are going now," he added.

EEC, Britain Reach Accord On Renegotiation Formula

All the members of the com-munity agreed that Britain has been in serious economic trouble since joining the community, although the budgetary problem is more symbolic than anything else. What has particularly distressed British leaders is that Britain has been running increasingly large deficits with the rest of community, as its imports have risen more sharply than ex-

Recognizing that this could happen to other members as well, the Nine were able to accept the compromise wording tonight.

Asked if he thought Britain would choose to stay in the com-munity, Mr. Giscard d'Estaing replied tonight: "The British people will decide, by referendum if I understand correctly."

After two years of trying, a regional policy for underdeveloped regions finally was set up to-day, which at $1.5 billion over three years is less than half the original sum proposed. The main beneficiaries will be Italy, with 40 per cent of the total, Britain with 28 per cent and Ireland with a flat $7.2 million.

The money comes from the community budget, so Britain will getting some of its money

The Nine also tried today to find a compromise on energy policy that would reconcile the French position with that of the rest of the community. As it appears now, the community will back the French call for a tripartite energy conference next year, and France will be expect-ed to support community energy policy within the OECD. Mr. Giscard d'Estaing made it clear, however, that he expects the main energy compromise to be settled between him and President Ford during their meeting in Martinique next weekend, "We are not seeking an energy posi-tion that depends on the Nine alone," he told newsmen today. There was modest agreement at yesterday's meeting on institutional reform that would permit some locsening of the veto right within council meetings to improve decision-making. There was also general agreement to move toward direct election of the Eu-ropean Parliament beginning in 1978. The British, however, expressed reservations on both these

Mr. Kissinger left Washington today for a NATO Ministerial Council meeting in Brussels. He plans to confer in Brussels with the foreign ministers of Greece and Turkey on the Cyprus issue.

The State Department's intention is to cite Mr. Kissinger's discussions with the Turkish and Greek foreign ministers in Brussels as an added reason for contimping Turkish aid while exploratory negotiations are under way.

Administration officials vesterday expressed hope that the House sponsors of the cutoff would now allow more time for Mr. Kissinger's diplomacy.

However, there was no sign of such a move. On the contrary, Rep. Benjamin Rosenthal, D N.Y., the chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Subcommittee on Europe, yesterday was reported to be determined to attach a continuing cutoff amendment to the pending foreign-aid bill.

A vote on the Rosenthal amendment is not expected before tomorrow. Rep. John Brademas, D-Ind., a supporter of the aid cutoff to Turkey, said last night: "I would assume that the House will maintain its position."

Mr. Daley, 71, suffered a slight stroke earlier this year and un-derwent surgery to prevent a recurrence. His illness aroused speculation that he would finally relinguish his control of the powerful Chicago Democratic organization. He has been the city's mayor since 1955.

Memo on Vladivostok Accord Still Not Final, U.S. Admits

By Bernard Gwertzman

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10 (NYT). Although the White House said last week that the United States and the Soviet Union had agreed on a memorandum of the Vladivostok arms control agreement, the administration acknowledged yesterday that the exact language of that document was still being discussed with the Russians.

It made the admission after it was learned that the United States had raised questions with the Soviet Union about the wording of the side-memoire that is supposed to stand as the record of what the two sides agreed upon in Vladivostok.

But both White House and State Department officials em-phasized that the questions under discussion were not major and did not deal with matters of great substance.

Key Clauses Stand

They said that the key elements of the tentative accord— a ceiling of 2,400 on long-range missiles and bombers, of which 1,320 missiles can be equipped with multiple warheads-remained unchallenged, as do the other parts of the accord made public

But officials would not give details on what was under dis-cussion. One official said he would not challenge speculation that the United States was trying to insert new language into the document, which reportedly consists of about one single-spaced typewritten page. On Monday of last week, White House Press Secretary Ronald Nessen was asked whether aidemémoires had been exchanged. He replied that the Soviet letter had been received two days earlier.

He was then asked: "Rach has agreed on the aide-mémoire and they exchanged it?"
"Yes, that is correct," he re-

Mr. Nessen acknowledged that he had not seen the documents. A White House spokesman said yesterday that "the language of the aide-mémoire is still under discussion." A State Department official said that "Nessen must have misspoken; he was not try-ing to be misleading."

Sen. Howard Baker, R-Tenn. pushed his own measure, cosponsored by 33 senators, create a new joint congressional committee on "intelligence oversight," which would examine foreign and domestic spy activities.

Sen. Gaylord Nelson, D-Wis., spoke for his more modest proposal-a joint committee aimed only at monitoring domestic surveillance activities. Sen. Ex-Gov. Babcock Admits Guilt Daily in U.S. Over Oil Man's Gifts to Nixon Set to Work

Former GOP Gov. Tim Babcock of Montana pleaded guilty today to helping oil millionaire Armand Hammer make illegal political contributions totaling $54,000 to the 1972 Nixon re-election campaign.

Babcock, now a businessman in Helena, Mont., pleaded guilty to making the contributions in the names of himself and others when the money actually came from Mr. Hammer. Chief U.S. District Court Judge George Hart postponed sentencing pending the completion of a pre-sentence inrestigation.

The legal information or document which describes Babcock's activities cited him for making the illegal contributions from Sept. 15, 1972, to June 16, 1974.

The information did not spell out why some of the contributions were made long after the 1972 ra-election of former President Richard Nixon.

A letter from the special Watergate prosecutor's office to Babcock's lawyers said the guilty plea would "dispose of potential charges against Babcock on matters presently known to this arising out of the Hammer-Babcock campaign contribu-tion currently under investigation by this office and the grand jury..."

Last May the U.S. Export-Import Bank granted a $180-million loan to the Soviet Union to help finance construction of a huge fertilizer complex, including a 1,200-mile pipeline to the Black Sea. The project was worked out by Mr. Hammer. The loan was described at the time as the largest ever extended to the Soviet Union by the bank. Babcock pleaded guilty to a misdemeanor carrying a maximum penalty of one year in jail or a fine of $1,000 or both.

Contributions Listed The information listed the contributions as $15,000 on or about Sept. 15, 1972; $25,000 on or about Nov. 3, 1972, and $14,000 on Jan.

In May of 1978, the informa tion said Babcock had told officials of the Finance Committee to Re-Elect the President that the contributions came from persons other than Mr. Hammer. The information also accused Babcock of providing illegal help to Mr. Hammer from Sept. 15, 1972, to June 16, 1974.

At the time the contributions were actually made. Babcock was a vice-president of Occidental International, a subsidiary of Occidental Petroleum. He was governor of Montana from 1962 until 1968 before joining the Washington office of Occidental.

The Star-News unit of the Washington-Baltimore Newspaper Guild agreed, by a 347-44 vote, to a four-day workweek for four days pay to carry out needed economies at the afternoon daily. Spanish Police Brace for Strike In Basque Areas

MADRID, Dec. 10 (UPI).-The police foday moved reinforce-ments to two Spanish provinces where a general strike has been called for tomorrow to support demands for better treatment of political prisoners, opposition sources said.

The strikes were called by a coalition of underground leftist organizations in Guipuzcoa and avarre, two northern provinces that are centers of Basque separatist and leftist activity.

The sources said strong police reinforcements have been moved to the provincial capitals of San Sebastian and Pamplona and other industrial centers in the region. Strikes are illegal in

In San Sebastian last week, strikes in support of political prisoners, 140 of whom went on a hunger strike earlier this mouth, paralyzed parts of the city. In Pamplona, almost 10,000 industrial workers demanding higher wages were already on strike or locked out for work stoppages, according to the press agency Logos.

UN Unit Confirms Massacre And Torture in Mozambique

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y., Dec. (Reuters). - Portuguese and Rhodesian soldiers were responsible for the torture and massacre of at least 1,000 Africans in westcentral Mosambique in the last three years of the war of independence, according to a UN report released here yesterday.

The previous Portuguese government, whose determination to maintain its African colonies desnite African guerrilla successes led to the military coup in Lisbon last April, had denied that massacres took place.

The report also established the existence of a village, Wiriyamu, where some 200 people were killed, although the former Portuguese the village.

The report was compiled by a special five-nation commission of inquiry on the reported massacres in Mozambique. The commission was formed through Scandinavian and African initiatives despite opposition by Portugal, Spain, the United States and South Africa. News of the mass murders surfaced last year when a British priest publicized the testimony of some Spanish priests who had fled Mozambique.

Priests', Nuns' Testimony In the course of its work, the commission interviewed 28 European priests and nuns, several members of the Mozambique guerrills movement, Frelimo, which now controls the provisional government of the territory, and some residents of the areas of Tete District, where the major atrocities took place. In addition to the killing of the entire populations of small villages, the report mentioned the disembowelment of pregnant Afri-can women, electric-shock torture, forced relocation of populations and break-up of families, Fortugal gave Ehodesian troops carte blanche to sweep into the territory to hunt guerrilles, and the UN report said the Rhodesians killed several people, including children, in the Mucumbura area.

Commission's Findings Among the commission's findings were the following:

· Portuguese troops and secret police killed more than 400 in the Tete villages of Chawola, Joac and Wirlyamu, which are at the confluence of the Zambesi and Luenha Rivers, in December, 1972. Wiriyamu was also known as Viliano Valete.

Farmers Ask EEC for 18% Boost in Prices

By David Haworth

BRUSSELS, Dec. 10 (IHT) .-European Economic Community farmers are demanding that the biggest rise they have ever had in guaranteed farm prices should come into operation next year. They want an average hike of 18 per cent, asserting that only a fraction of this will benefit farmsince 15 per cent is to cover cost increases during the last two years and anticipated rises in 1975.

The demand has been lodged with the European Commission by the Committee of Professional Agricultural Organizations (CO-PA), the EEC's most influential

Among the price hikes the farmers want are 20 per cent for sugar, 15 per cent for milk, 20 per cent for soft wheat, 15 per cent for pork and beef, plus an in-definite extension of the current ban on beef imports from non-

EEC countries, COPA is seeking a rise of 15 per cent in the guaranteed price of corn, barley and tobacco and suggests that olive-oil prices should go up by 25 per cent.

If granted in full, such ins would add a vicious twist to the inflationary spiral affecting the economies of all nine EEC member nations. The political implications of granting them would, therefore, be very considerable. For this reason it can be confidently assumed that the farm-price increases for the next season, to be negotiated by EEC ministers between now and a Feb. 1 deadline, will fall well short of the farmers' demands.

The claim must be understood as an initial bargaining position, but COPA is bound to threaten further demonstrations and unrest among Europe's 10 million farmers if there is not a very substantial hike in prices. The percentage increases sought

There was no discussion of price increases yesterday by the farm ministers, who met here for two days of talks.

Today, the ministers held only a brief discussion about rises, with each country stating its negotiating position without debate. The unexpectedly short and inconclusive meeting was a consequence of the illness of the French chairman, Christian Bonnet. At his request the discussions were ended early.

All the ministers had time, however, to express their anxieties about the possible inflationary effects that price increases would have, although it was generally accepted that the final price package would have to include a sufficient incentive to farmers to go on producing. If not, food production in the community would decline, driving retail prices

The ministers will have to srtike a delicate balance between these two factors in meetings next month. British Agriculture Minister Fred Peart admitted tonight that the task would be "both difficult and delicate." He also made it clear to his ministerial col-leagues that Britain must get satisfaction for its own demands. Such an achievement, he said, would be a vital element in Britain's attitude toward the renegotiation of the country's terms of KEC membership.

Mr. Miki made his decision known to members of his cabinet just before their first full-scale meeting at the Premier's official residence this morning. According to aides who reported the plan, Mr. Miki hinted-but did not demand—that cabinet officers should follow suit.

Mr. Miki, 67, was officially elected Premier yesterday. He was picked last week by the ruling party to succeed Kaknei Tanaka, who resigned as a result of public attacks on his financial dealings

Mr. Tanaka refused to disclose his financial position after charges of irregularities were made in a magazine two months ago. The former premier's tax returns are under special study by the National Tax Administration, and opposition parties are demanding that investigations of his "money politics" be pressed.

Mr. Miki did not say how or when he will make the disclosure of his finances, but his move is expected in the near future.

Tokyo's Sankei newspaper recently carried a detailed account of Mr. Miki's financial affairs, as made available by his staff and government offices. According to the account. Mr. Miki reported taxable income last year equivalent to about $51,000. He was said to own a private residence on which he pays semiannual mortgage installments, a villa in the Karuizawa resort area, a country house near Tokyo and the Miki family home on the island of Shikoku

Mideastern Quartet

The ultimate objective of any sane Middle Eastern diplomacy, of course, is to have a full chorus of all interests involved, with as much harmony as possible. Israeli Foreign Minister Yigal Allon made that point in talks with Washington newsmen, saying that his discussions with President Ford and Mr. Kissinger dealt not only with an accord with Egypt, but "the entire Middle East, because each one of the countries of the Middle East is a candidate for political progress and agreements."

The initial moves toward such agreements, however, in the Kissinger mode of step-bystep negotiations, are directed toward Israeli-Egyptian partial settlements, with the United States acting as mediator. This is recognized, and apparently accepted, by Egypt. But the passage of time and the lack of progress anywhere-unless the new prominence of the Palestine Liberation Organization can be considered progress—has reduced the effectiveness of the American initiatives. Egyptian Foreign Minister Ismail Fahmy has said that it was in Egypt's "national interest that the Soviet Union should play a greater role in the peacemaking effort.

In other words, the original trio, performing what were intended to be the opening chords of a great chorus, will be expanded to a quartet, if Egypt has its way. And Egypt seems more desirous than before of bringing the full Geneva conference into the composition.

This would raise a large number of complications. Instead of an agreement on Israeli withdrawals in the Sinai, accompanied by Egyptian moves toward nonbelligerence, as a prelude to other partial settlements with Syria, all of the tangled issues are likely to be thrown on the conference tables. with all of the points of friction exposed

What has happened in the past months is that the attitudes of both sides have become more difficult to reconcile; Arab impatience with Israeli slowness to make concessions has been coupled with closer Arab linking to Palestinian intransigence. In full conference, these could lead to a wordy stalemate and the increased danger of renewed war. Is it possible for the United States, and the Soviet Union, to act as joint mediators in preliminary discussions? Moscow seems wedded to bringing about the full Geneva conference as soon as possible. But, if given a responsible role in the present round of talks, perhaps the Soviet Union would adopt a more practical stand. And if detente has any constructive meaning, it should do so. Vladivostok raised as many questions as it supplied answers; the major question relates to the Middle East. Assuming that the Soviet Union wants a reasonable resolution of the chronic crisis there, it will help in efforts to bring about the full conference on a basis that offers some hope of gal removed its colonial hold from Mozambique and Angola, a stunning transformation has become possible in Rhodesla. The white minority government of Ian Smith, rendered more pliant by the collapse of Portuguese colonialism and by the guns of African guerrillas, has begun considering the terms on which it would negotiate a constitutional transition to majority rule. Over the weekend, Mr. Smith rejected proposals based on "immediate" majority rule, but the bargaining is still going on. The rival African nationalist movements in Rhodesia have finally set aside their own considerable differences to present a united front to the Smith regime. Zambia and Tanzania, with their own interest in promoting a southern African détente, are encouraging the talks.

South Africa is the principal moving force behind these new developments. Seeing its former buffer of South-West Africa (due 10r independence), Botswana, white-ruled Rhodesia and colonial Mozambique crumbling, South Africa set out this year to adjust its external relations. As part of this effort, Pretoria evidently has undertaken to use its influence to expedite majority rule in South-West Africa. In return, the black the changes in the nations to the north, African nations would leash guerrillas and

The pace of change in southern Africa is accord South Africa certain greater room for quickening. Only a few months after Portu- a good-faith effort to soften apartheid. Currently South Africa provides police assistance to Rhodesia. This would end if the reins were taken in Salisbury by a majority government committed to coexistence. Pretoria's farm surpluses, technology, labor market and its general affluence and military strength give it valuable cards to play in dealing with its less well endowed neighbors. South Africa is also well aware of the advantage which a good-neighbor policy can confer in its attempt to combat its growing isolation on the international scene.

As welcome and significant as are the changes occurring or portending in Rhodesia, South-West Africa and Mozambique, it remains so that the heart of the racial problem in southern Africa lies within South Africa itself. Pretoria's diplomacy—like its pledged intent to remove the more visible forms of racial discrimination at home—are patently designed to let it continue and consolidate its profoundly unjust system of apartheid, or "separate development." South Africa is prepared to respect the principles of racial equality and human dignity but only if they are put into effect on the far side of its own borders. This dark irony Rhodesia, and to hasten independence in must temper any satisfaction expressed at THE WASHINGTON POST.

International Opinion

Southern Africa Exercise

As black and white statesmen and political prisoners flit in semi-secrecy about southern Africa, it is well that we should recognize what, in spite of all the obvious difficulties that stand in the way, is the object of this unexpected exercise. The immediate talks may have broken down, but the significant thing is that they should have started at all, for their aim is nothing less than to call a truce—temporary, perhaps, but real-in that African racial confrontation that has bedevilled the whole world community for a quarter of a century.

The picture that is taking shape in many minds is one in which all the outposts of white supremacy in southern Africa will, more or less peacefully, be abandoned. This is already happening in Mozambique and Angola, and it has been half-promised for South-West Africa. If by agreement Rhodesia were to be set, however gradually, on the road to majority rule, an intractable international problem would at least be reduced to its true proportions.

The Old Tightrope Walker

Even Greeks should beware of Greeks bearing gifts-or making extravagant promises. Already his beatitude [Archbishop Makarios] is too keen on sunshine rhetoric. Already he has built up the multitude only, surely, to let them down. Promises aside, however, the long-awaited return has gone off far better than most observers dared hope. The Greek Cypriot side is at last in a condition to strike meaningful bargains and indeed, greatly strengthened merely by getting the old tightrope walker back on his apparatus. Archbishop Makarlos is not a reasonable man. He is an obscurantist, pragmatic, infuriating, and long-winded. But when he sets his seal to a deal, all of Cyprus will know there are no better terms available.

Conviction of Capucci

The Most Rev. Hilarion Capucci, the Greek Catholic archbishop of Jerusalem, was found guilty by an Israeli court of performing services for the Fatah organization and illegally carrying and possessing weapons. Most Christians are not pacifists. But it is the special role of the clergy to keep alive the virtue of compassion in the nation at war, to remind the fighter that his enemy is also his brother and that public peril cannot justify public hate.

The deliberate infliction of violence and death on unarmed civilians when they are not directly involved in the enemy war effort, and particularly on children, should be outlawed by every humanistic code, whether Christian or not. Even in a just war. Christian clergyman have a duty to dissuade their compatriots from embarking on such acts, and to condemn them unequivocally when they occur . . . It is obviously for bishops to set the example in this respect.

What Price Glory in NATO?

By C.L. Sulzberger

paris - Sandwiched between summit meetings and diplomatic negotiations, this week is supposed to mark significant events in the 25-year-old North Atlantic Alliance. Gen. Alexander Haig assumed command over NATO forces in Europe yesterday and the coalition's defense and foreign ministers gathered in Brussels for their annual winter conference.

Undoubtedly it is an accomplishment that the alliance has survived a quarter-century of subsiding East-West tensions. growing disintegration within the West itself, and the beginning of a major recession that makes it increasingly unpopular for democratic governments to spend large sums on defense.

The mood is glum. A new generation sees little reason to arm against Russia while at the same time jovially courting its favor and also feels no closer to the brutalities of World War II than it does to the Napoleonic conflict. Nor has Western leadership done much to attract support. Little by little NATO is being nibbled by time and boredom. It is slowly dying on its bottom in interminable committee

It is time to challenge the comfortable assumption that simply because the alliance exists, all possibility of major war is ex-cluded. There has been no holocaust since NATO's birth but there have been plenty of mili-tary actions, often involving alliance members: France, Britain, the United States, Portugal, Greece and Turkey.

One hears continual talk of the need for interallied openness on crucial matters but sees little evidence that this is displayed during crises—especially when one or another ally deems its own national interests of no concern to others.

And militarily what is NATO's meaning? Greece and Turkey have been members for 22 years and one thing exposed by their private crisis last summer was the appalling mess of their re-spective military situations. They have been training troops under NATO guidance, with NATO weapons and NATO strategists all this time—and yet?

During their summer tightrope act on the brink, the Turkish Army planned an amphibious operation against Cyprus with twinned simultaneous landings at Kyrenia and Famagusta. The second didn't come off for weeks The Turks also bombed and sank with heavy losses one of their own destroyers, mistaken for a

The Greeks shot down one of their own planes, reported the departure for unknown parts of a Turkish armada that didn't exist, and proved wholly unable to carry out even the rudiments of mobilization. What have these two countries learned about how defend themselves even against each other, which is not the object of the exercise?

On a larger scale, the alliance has never achieved its dream of producing sensible arms stan-dardization to keep the cost of modern weapons down. NATO uses 25 types of aircraft and alism got the better of rationalism-as emphasized in the argument about NATO's next generation of jets.

This dispute underscores that despite tons of communiques, the allies have made little progress toward creating their own arms industry and never fully agreed on the logic of this vital necessity. France is now riven by savage debate on the matter. Because Gen. Paul Stehlin, a parliamentary deputy and former air force chief, had the temerity to suggest that American aircraft are superior and cheaper than the latest French Mirages offered to NATO purchasers, he has been Stehlin has now published a book in his own defense, pointing out that the French contender doesn't even exist because it hasn't yet been tested with its new engine. He dismisses as un-true allegations that Europe in general and France in particular would lose industrial orders and jobs by accepting suggested U.S.

Energies Eroded

Contradicting him, a report to the Assembly of the Western European Union complains: "The problem of the nature of the alliance arises: Is the aim a partnership between equals or a strengthening of United States leadership in the defense field by extending it to the field in which

Europe is trying to assert itself, ie, that of the economy?' Debates questioning the inner philosophy of the alliance erode its fading energies. NATO complains privately that Kissinger doesn't consult enough and Kissinger complains privately that NATO doesn't consult at all.

The allied armies—if Greece and Turkey provide any clue-have learned little and forgotten their raison d'être. There is no overall strategy (French missile warheads would land in West Germany if used in war). And there isn't even a common weapons program. Is a quarter-century not long enough to make these matters appear urgent?

Lessons of WW II

Today's Ultra Secrets

By William Safire

Leslie Howard, whom generations of Americans remember as the gentle Ashley Wilkes in "Gone With the Wind," boarded an aircraft early in World War II on a secret mission. The Germans knew about it and shot down the unarmed plane. The British knew beforehand that the Germans knew, but to protect the secret of how they knew, British intelligence let the plane go down and the actor die. On another occasion, Field Marshal Goering's Luftwaffe targeted the city of Coventry for saturation bombing, to show Britons the horror of continued resistance. Winston Churchill was told of the plan in time to have been able to evacuate Coventry; to protect the secret of how he knew, he chose to allow the name of Coventry to become synonymous with

The secret that had to be protected at all costs was "The Ultra Secret," disclosed after 35 years in a book by Frederick Winterbotham, now 76, who had been an RAF intelligence officer. The secret was this: The British had cracked the seemingly unbreak-able code of the Nazi high command, and were able to read their opponent's top-level mes-sages throughout the war.

Aging Ex-Spies

The other night, the Veterans of the Office of Strategic Services -predecessor to the CIA-gathered in Washington to present the William Donovan Award to Export-Import Bank chairman William Casey, who had been the American chief of secret intelligence in Europe during World War II. The room was filled with aging, fairly successful men —Hale-fellows-well-met who had led spying or resistance operations in a war against an undoubted enemy when they were young and

Casey told how information gathered by Ultra which not even the OSS knew about at the time—was used to help protect Allied forces in the invasion of Europe_

German Gen. Von Rundstedt believed that "Overlord"—the Allied invasion of Europe would be launched at Calais, across the narrowest part of the English Channel; Gen. Rommel disagreed. predicting it would come in Normandy. Rommel was right, of course; but despite the theft of the plans for "Overlord" by an intrepid German spy in Turkey, and even after the Normandy landings took place on D-Day, Hitler would not commit all available forces to smashing the Allied

Giant Deception

That was because of a giant deception by the Allies, which had the Germans believing that the Normandy landing was a mere diversion, and that 30 divisions of Allied troops—which never existed—were poised to strike at WASHINGTON.—British actor Calais as soon as German panze divisions there moved south to Normandy.

When Ultra intercepts showe that Hitler was torn between Von Rundstedt and Rommel, Allie intelligence was told by Risen hower and Churchill to redoubt the flow of false information backing up the deluded Von Rund stedt's belief. They did; Hitle would not send reserves to Rom mel: the Allied beachhead wa not driven back into the sea Think of it: The Germans ha stolen the plans for D-Day, an even after the landings began would not act on their informs tion, because Allied intelligenc had convinced them that th stolen secret—and even what the eyes were telling them-was no to be believed.

Breathtaking stuff. Masterfy decett. And the ruthless decision of Churchill to let men and citie die rather than expose the secre was justified in history.

To send actor Howard to hi death meant the opportunity late to shoot down the plane of Jap anese Admiral Yamamoto, an the thousands killed and maime at Coventry would make it pos sible to keep Normandy from turning into another Dunklet But the alternatives faced at the time by Churchill, F.D.R. and the handful of men making the deci sions to protect the secret mus have seared their souls.

A long generation later, we are still making what we now cal "tradeoffs," without the drams certainly without the heroics, an without the courage to explon the conscious choices we are being forced to make.

We have chosen to throw mil. lions of men and women out o work so that inflation can be curried and our economy brough back from the brink, and we must now choose whether to adop a line of absolute economic die tatorship.

We have chosen to throw more than $100 billion over the next decade into the direct purchase of nuclear arms, which we call limit. ing the arms race, because we hope that any agreement to race shoulder-to-shoulder-with neither side leading-will ensure human survival.

Starving Millions

We have chosen to try to feed starving millions without demanding stringent population control, salving our consciences today but probably causing 16 times the starvation in the coming

In today's world, Coventrys still have to be sacrificed, but we shut our eyes to the life-and-death consequences of the choices we

Paralysis of Ford

By William F. Buckley Jr.

NEW YORK-It is true that President Ford has permitted himself to look and act a little bit like Joe Palooks in recent weeks, and behold, the country is sore afraid. People who have experienced Gerald Ford at close quarters know that he is a man of nimble intelligence who quickly understands the dimensions of a problem. Clearly his difficulty lies in having acquired the habit, over the years, of approaching problems with more or less count consideration given to several factors: How would Congress react, how would the folks back home react, how would the special interests react, how would the White House react, Now that the White House is Ford, it requires readjustment of habits. That readjustment is not Everyone agrees that he com-mitted a very bad slip when, in opposing a gasoline tax, he gave as the principal reason for doing so that "81 per cent of the people" were against the tax. Eightyone per cent of the people are against any tax, except maybe against oil companies.

Putting entirely aside the question whether there ought to be a gasoline tax, the reason why there should be such a tax or shouldn't be such a tax quehtn't to be decided conclusively by the fleeting unpopularity of it. I say fleeting unpopularity because there is already a very heavy federal tax on gasoline, and as a professional injustice collector, I have yet to hear a single complaint against it. People get used to things. That is both good and bad. They get used to the heavy, spirit-extinguishing taxation of omnipotent government. It does not require very much from the leader to persuade a people suffering from inflation and oil blackmail that you need to increase the tax on gasoline. But here is where Mr. Ford's instincts may be doing him a good service. To impose a tax upon oneself is hard enough. A tax approaches unendurability when the purpose of that tax is not entirely palpable. For emotional reasons, the very best taxes are those that are being used either to reward people or to punish them. An example is a raise in social security payments for old people. There will be a little grumbling, but not much The second was a tax to build bombers and submarines to rip the hell out of the Japanese Navy in retaliation for Pearl Harbor: that kind of tax came as close to being a popular tax as any in recent history.

The blanket tax on gasoline is missing that form of discrimination that gives it a moral flavor. That is why the President should recommend to Congress a dif-ferentiated tax: a tax that falls more heavily on the products of a country that seeks to do us damage, less heavily on the products of a country that does not seek to do us damage. The quadrupling in the price had the effect of raising the price of oil elsewhere for the very simple reason that economic :- :: laws go to work to the advantage: . . _ of all countries, or companies, in possession of goods suddenly grown scarce. If the local groce happened to have a huge stock. of sugar on hand when the price. of it suddenly went up from 10 cents to 80 cents, he is going, to sell his sugar for the new price. rather than for the old price.

Punitive Act

But the price set by the Persian Gulf states tends to be punitive in its effect as in its intention. It is for this reason that a discriminatory tax, which would? accomplish the objective of decreasing consumption, would sat-isfy the national, and altogether wholesome, resolution to hit back at the profiteers.

Set a tax, at the port of entry, designed exactly to double the blackmail factor. If Saudi Arabia is charging us $10 for $5 fuel, then tax Saudi Arabian fuel $5 as it comes across the border. The price increase is passed along to the consumer: but always the market is looking for cheaper fuel, and the inducement is there. for oil-producing states that need? U.S. patronage, to ease down their prices, to capture a better. share of the market thus fracturing the cartel. Mr. Ford must move soon. Here is a way !

(IHT, Dec. 3) on the new British laws to combat the IRA describes them as "unprecedented in peacetime." When has there ever been peace between the Irish and English? There have only been exhausted intervals between battles. As for precedent, these measures could not be more precedented. Since the Middle Ages Parliament has forever been passing special laws to suppress the Irish. They reached their peak in the Penal Laws of the 18th century. In the 19th century Parliament bypassed the constitution nearly 800 times to pass Paris, acts known unsuphemistically as "coercion" bills. The present law is related to one that was taken off the books only in 1958 and contains elements of many others going back 100 years. The editorial also unfairly characterizes Americans as being "duped" into giving money to the IRA. What is really surprising is how very little money they have given. The sum is probably infinitesimal when one thinks of what the tens of millions of Americans of Irish descent could do if they ever got aroused as they were in the last century by the Fenian movement.

Irish Americans may look with anguish at the violence and suffering in the island of their ancestors but they now feel they have only one national allegiance, to the United States.

Speech of the great leader Comrade KIM IL SUNG

"On the situation of our country and tasks of the league of Korean youth in Japan"

(PART 1)

PYONGYANG, September 27 (KCNA).—The great leader Comrade Kim Il Sung received the home-visiting group of art and sports delegates of Korean youth in Japan, the second home-visiting group of Korean educational workers in Japan and the home-visiting group of the Korean high school students in Japan and made α program speech on September 24, 1974.

The shorthand text of the speech of the great leader Comrade Kim Il Sung reads in full:

I am very happy to meet today comrades representatives of Korean youth, comrades representatives of students and comrades representatives of educational workers in Japan who are valiantly fighting there for the fatherland, defense of the democratic; national rights and for the reunification of the fatherland. It is thanks to the powerful struggle you comrades have waged for defending the democratic, national rights that today we have come to meet like this in Pyongyang, the capital of revolution.

I, on behalf of the Central Committee of the Workers' Party of Korea, the government of the republic and the entire people, educational workers, youth and students in the homeland, warmly welcome you comrades and extend warm greetings to you.

We often meet in Pyongyang delegations of foreign countries and always meet workers in various domains of our country, but it pleases us most to meet the compariots who have come to the homeland from Japan. Still fresh in my memory is how I was pleased to meet the students of the soccer team of the Korean Middle and High School in Tokyo and the song and dance circle of the Korean Primary School in Yokohama and how impressive it was for me to meet the students of the music and sports circle of the Korea University, who had once come to the beneford.

Very deep is the kindred affection among the people. Each time we hear the news that compatriots, brothers and sisters who are living, undergoing hardships in an alien land are to visit the homeland and particularly, we meet the compatriots who have come to the homeland, a thousand emotions and excitements well in our mind.

I am immensely pleased today to meet Korean youth and students and educational workers who have come to the homeland from Japan. It is not the feeling entertained by me alone, but you are also of the same feeling and, more, all the people of our country will feel alike, I think.

When we meet the youth, students and people of South Korea after reunifying the country in future just as we do, it will please and impress us all the more.

This meeting of ours today, I think, will be imprinted forever on your memories and on my mind as a significant meeting.

You are so greatly overloyed at this meeting today that you are shedding tears of emotion. You being so excited, I also feel a lump in my throat and my voice fails to make a speech.

Comrades, calm yourselves.

We will meet again in the future in the course of waging together the revolutionary struggle. Let us all struggle well to the end, meeting and parting, parting and meeting again on the one road of revolution and thus accomplish the cause of national reunification, the greatest aspiration of our nation, without fail.

Today I would like to tell you comrades about the situation obtaining in our country and about some tasks lacing the League of Korean Youth in Japan.

I.—On the situation of our country.

It is necessary, I think, for you on a visit to the homeland to acquaint yourselves well with the situation obtaining in our country before returning.

Today the situation of our country is very good. Though the South Korean reactionaries and the U.S. and Japanese and other reactionaries of the world are maliciously trying to defame our republic, the general situation is developing more and more in favour of our revolution.

The most important target of struggle put forth by our party today is to realize the country's reunification, the greatest desire and cherished aspiration of our nation.

Our party has advanced three tasks to accomplish the historic cause of national reunification.

The first task is to powerfully push ahead with the socialist construction in the northern half of the republic. Only when the socialist construction is dynamically pushed ahead in the northern half of the republic is it possible to solidly build up the base of revolution, and only when the base of revolution is solidly built up is it possible to salidly the cause of national reunification with success. The revolutionary base of the northern half of the republic

The second task is to strengthen the revolutionary lorces of South Korea by actively supporting the democratic movement of the South Korean people. The reunification of the country will not be achieved only with the successful socialist construction in the northern half of the republic. When the democratic movement of the South Korean people develops, the democratic forces of South Korea and the socialist forces of the northern half will be united and the cause of national reunification achieved with

The third task is to strengthen unity with the international revolutionary forces. The enemies with whom we are standing face to face are the South Korean reactionaries as well as the reactionaries of the United States and Japan. The U.S. and Japanese reactionaries are the leading chief-tains of reaction in the world. In order to fight and win the chieftains of the world reaction, our people should cement unity with all the revolutionary forces of the world. We should unite with the peoples of the socialist countries, unite with the peoples of the third-world countries, unite with the peoples of the countries fighting for national independence, unite with the working class of the capitalist countries fighting against oppression and exploitation by applied and unite with all the peaceloving people of the world.

As mentioned above, only by successfully carrying on the socialist construction in the northern half of the republic to solidly build up the base of revolution, supporting the democratic movement of the South Korean people to strengthen the revolutionary forces of South Korea and cementing the unity with the international revolutionary forces, can we win in the fight against the chieftains of the world reaction, reunify the fatherland and achieve the nation-wide victory of the revolution.

I think that you may clearly acquaint yourselves with the situation obtaining in our country when you are told of how the three tasks for national reunification put forward by our party are now being carried out in the home

I will tell you first about the situation of socialist construction in the northern half of the republic.

To build socialism in the northern half of the republic is a line maintained all along by our party since our country was liberated from the colonial rule of Japanese im-

For building socialism and communism, it is imperative to fulfil three revolutions, namely, the ideological, technical and cultural revolutions.

As we have already said on various occasions, socialism and communism are by no means built only by constructing many factories and making the chimneys of factories give off volumes of smoke. The historic experiences show that in order to successfully build socialism and communism, the two fortresses for the building of communism, the material and ideological fortresses, must be captured alike without fail, for capturing both the material and ideological fortresses, the ideological, technical and cultural revolutions must be thoroughly carried to fulfil them.

Now our party puts forth the three revolutions, ideological, technical and cultural, as the most important tasks in socialist construction and is energetically striving to fulfil them.

Our party is powerfully carrying on the ideological revolution above all.

The main point in the ideological revolution is to arm all the party members, working people and youth with the revolutionary idea, the Juche idea, of our party.

The Korean revolution must be fulfilled by the Korean people themselves under the leadership of the Workers' Party of Korea. To this end, all the party members and working people should be firmly armed with the revolutionary idea, the Juche idea, of our party. If a Korean is not armed with the idea of our party, but espouses the idea of a party of another country, he cannot be called a man who lives for the Korean revolution, and he cannot make the Korean revolution well. The party members and working people can successfully fulfil the Korean revolution only when all of them are solidly armed with the revolutionary idea, the Juche idea, of our party and have the unswerving stand and viewpoint of knowing no other idea than the idea of our party.

In order to arm the party members and working people with the revolutionary idea, the Juche idea, of our party, a powerful struggle must be waged against the capitalist, feudal Confucian, revisionist and flunkeyist ideas and all other antiquated ideas.

The struggle against the antiquated ideas is not a struggle against the persons themselves who have them, but an ideological struggle for rooting out the old ideas remaining in the minds of people. The ideological struggle must under no circumstances be carried out by

The basic way for liquidating the old ideas is to strengthen study and organisational life. We are striving to uproot the old ideas remaining in the minds of the party members and working people and arm them with the revolutionary idea, the Juche idea, of our party by the method of educating and the method of strengthening organisational life. Now in the homeland, a strict discipline of all people studying has been established and the members of the League of Socialist Working Youth take an active part in the organisational life of the LSWY, the trade union members in the organisational life of the trade union, the members of the Union of Agricultural Working People in the organisational life of the Women's Union members in the organisational life of the Women's Union and the party members in the party organisational

When all the party members and working people are firmly armed with the Juche idea and guided to breathe with the Juche idea at any time and in any place and act in accordance with the demand of the Juche idea, a greater victory will be won in the socialist construction. When the whole bodies of the people are filled with the Juche idea, all the party members, working people, soldiers and youth and students will be firmly united with one idea and one will; and when the entire people are united with one mind and one will, the socialist construction will be dynamically pushed ahead and the difficulties cropping up in the revolutionary struggle be successfully over-

What is important next in the ideological revolution is to educate all the people in the love of work.

Labour in socialist society is the most sacred and honourable thing. Those who hate to work and like to eat the bread of idleness are not welcomed anywhere in our society.

There is mental and physical labour in labour; everybody should do work, either mental or physical. All the people should work in communist society, too. Our party advanced the line of revolutionizing and working-classizing all the members of society by strengthening the ideological revolution. To revolutionize and working-classize all the members of society is the basic aim of the ideological revolution.

Now the ideological revolution is going well in the homeland. With the successful progress of the ideological revolution, the technical revolution is also going well and all the revolutionary tasks put forward by the party are being successfully fulfilled. Recently in particular, the party centre directly sent groups for three revolutions down to factories, enterprises and co-operative farms to help the workers of the lower units, with the result that the ideological, technical and cultural revolutions are going on successfully.

In order to successfully build socialism and communism, the technical revolution should be energetically pushed ahead along with the ideological revolution. Only when the political and ideological preparations of the people are backed by material forces through the technical revolution can our revolutionary forces grow

The technical revolution is an important revolutionary task to consolidate the economic foundation of the country and free the working people from toilsome work. The technical revolution should be regarded not onesidedly as a task to consolidate the material foundation, but always as a political task.

Some people think that the technical revolution has its purpose simply in developing technique and productive forces and producing greater material wealth to eat well, dress well and lead a material life of plenty. But, the purpose of the technical revolution does not confine to this alone. The more important purpose of the technical revolution is to free all the working people from arduous and difficult labour.

Even though goods are produced in great quantities on the one hand through the development of technology, if the working people do toilsome and harmful labour and their health is affected, on the other, it is of no use at all. For instance, though it is said that technology is developed in Japan, the people are greatly suffering from serious air pollution. We cannot say that such technological development conforms to the purpose of the technical revolution.

The technical revolution is primarily a struggle for freeing all the working people from backbreaking and difficult labour. We say simply technical revolution to avoid long words, but, to express correctly, we should call it the revolution for freeing the working people from arduous labour.

It is the most important revolutionary task facing the Communists to free the working people from arduous and difficult labour. Needless to say, it is very important to emancipate the working people from exploitation and oppression. But, this is not enough. Only by relieving even from arduous labour the working people freed from exploitation and oppression after the overthrow of the old exploiting system can the Communists say that they have fully discharged their duty. It is the most important revolutionary task to free the working people from arduous labour after liberating them from oppression by imperialism and exploiter classes.

Thus, the technical revolution is not a technical and business-like task for producing mass consumption goods and equipment in greater quantities, but a task of political character.

When consumer goods and equipment are not only produced in great quantities but also manufactured easily, the people who use them will feel at ease. When rice is produced easily, the mind of the people who eat it will also be light. If it is produced with difficulty, the mind of the people who eat it will not be comfortable and rice would not go down the throat well. Those who do not care with what difficulty the peasants produced rice, but think only of their eating well are not men of conscience and thinking, so is the idea of the exploiter classes such as landlords and capitalists.

We have not yet completely freed the working people from toilsome labour nor have we abolished the distinction between heavy and light labour, between agricultural and industrial labour, between physical and mental labour. We intend to do away with the distinction between heavy and light labour, distinction between agricultural and industrial labour, free women from the heavy burdens of household chores and, furthermore, abolish the distinction between physical and mental labour. By making the working people turn out quantities of goods while working with ease we plan to enable all the members of society to work according to their ability and receive distribution according to their needs. This is the very target of Communication.

Such tasks cannot, of course, be carried out in a short time. Therefore, it is prescribed in the report to the Fifth

Congress of our party that the distinctions between heavy and light labour and between agricultural and industrial work will be markedly narrowed during the 6-year plan period.

The tasks of the technical revolution are being successfully fulfilled in our country today.

The most toilsome work in our country is the labour in the domain of extractive industries such as felling trees, excavating coal and ores and doing geological prospecting. So we direct great efforts, in the first place, to the technical revolution in the extractive industries.

No less successful is the progress of the struggle for eliminating the difference between agricultural and industrial work.

Agricultural work is yet more difficult than industrial work. We intend to eliminate the distinction between agricultural and industrial work in a brief period. There is, of course, much work yet to be done in the rural technical revolution. But, no small success has already been made in this domain. Irrigation has been carried out already long ago and electrification has also been realized in our country. And the goal of chemicalization set in the thesis on the rural question is expected to be attained about next year.

Mechanization has not yet been fulfilled in the rural districts of our country. We may say that there is no limit when it comes to the complete mechanization of agriculture. But we are going to fulfil the main things in the mechanization of agriculture by next year by dedicating efforts to it.

The thesis on the rural question provides for the supply of 70,000 to 80,000 tractors to the countryside and that many tractors have already found their way to the rural districts. But, 6 to 8 tractors are needed for each 100 chongbo of arable land, if we are to complete the methanization of agriculture. There are areas where many tractors have already been supplied, but a small number of them have gone to some areas. We should supply more tractors to be distributed evenly in all the areas in the future, then a bigger leap will be made in the agriculture of our country.

This year is a significant year in which we celebrated the 10th anniversary of the publication of the thesis on the rural question. In response to the call of the party for bringing again a great upsurge in agricultural production, with the 10th anniversary of the publication of the thesis on the rural question as a momentum, the peasants have done work with high enthusiasm, and the whole country has powerfully assisted the countryside, with the result that a great success has been registered in agricultural production this year.

A recent survey of the situation of farming this year revealed that a very marvellous success is foreseen. It is expected this year that 10 counties will produce 150,000 tons of grain each, 24 counties 100,000 tons and 31 counties 80,000 tons; that is, as many as 65 counties will turn out more than 80,000 tons each. Many counties are expected to double their grain output this year compared with last year. Bounteous crops have visited our country this year as we sing in our song: bumper harvest in apples, in rice and in all other crops. The political committee of the Central Committee of the party some time ago took a measure to send to the countryside all the trucks now produced to gather in the plentiful crops in time. From old times they soid one might be called rich only when his rice-chest was full and rice pot was filled to overflowing. Now the ricechests will be filled to overflowing everywhere in our country, which means that our country has become rich and the people will be better off.

It is not because the counties grew larger, but the agricultural productive forces have made such radical development that grain output has more than doubled in many counties this year. In other words, all this is a success brought about by the rural technical revolution.

Thus, the struggle for industricilizing agriculture and the struggle for eliminating the distinction between agricultural and industrial work are progressing very well in our country.

Going well likewise is the fulfillment of the tasks of the technical revolution for freeing the women from the heavy burden of household chores.

The women should be led into public life, if they are to be working-classized. They cannot be working-classized if they remain at home, not taking part in public life.

And the social emancipation of the women can be practically realized only when they assume work in society. The promulgation of the law on the equality of the sexes alone does not completely solve the problem of emancipating the women. For the practical realization of the social emancipation of the women, they should be led to participate in public life and assume work suitable for their ability: those fit for mental labour undertaking mental labour and those fit for physical labour assuming physical labour. There are many lines of work suitable for women in our society. The women can work as doctors and teachers, can work at light industrial factories, can work as saleswomen at stores and work in the domain of public service.

For widely drawing women into public life, the problem of freeing them from the heavy burden of household chares must be solved.

Now the women have to bear the double burden of labour when they participate in public life. In other words, the women have to do work just like men in society and do such household chores at home as cooking meals, taking care of the children, tending the clothes of the

It is very hard for the women physically weaker than men to assume the double burden of labour. Therefore, the fifth congress of our party set it forth as an important task to free the women from the heavy burden of household chares.

What is important in freeing the women from the burden of household chores is, first of all, to widely develop the work of rearing the children at state and public expense. The party and state have built nurseries and kindergartens everywhere, directing much effort to the work of rearing the children at state and public expense. Today, in our country, 3,500,000 children are growing at nurseries and kindergartens at state and public expense.

Engels said that it is an important Communist policy to rear at public expense all the children who left the side of their mothers. And we think that our country is the first to carry this Communist policy into practice.

We also throw great energy into the development of light industry. We supply dresses made at factories and produce and supply large quantities of processed food, washing machines, electric rice-cooking pots and other kitchen utensils so that women can do kitchen work and household chores with the cost of less time. Along with this, we take care that the service networks are expanded and better conveniences offered to the population.

Speech of the great leader Comrade KIM IL SUNG will be continued this Friday.

Ricky Ford is a 20-year-old tenor saxophonist who sounds like no tenor saxophonist Duke Ellington ever had. There are touches of Lester Young in his playing, other moments when he reminds one of Sonny Rollins. But essentially he is finding his own expressive way.

Mercer Eillington is dizging into the files and the band is now playing "Koko," "Conga Brava," "Chelsea Bridge," "Warm Valley," "Happy Go Lucky Local" and complete versions of "Black and Tan Fantasy' and "Liood Indigo."

The band is not yet playing these pieces with the flair and verve of the 1940-42 band, which created most of them. The material is still so new to the musi-cians that, at their North Brunswick performance, Mercer Ellington had to hold the music in front of Art Baron, trombonist, and Joe Temperley, bass clarinetist, when they joined Cootie Williams in the traditional trio on "Mood Indigo."

The program cleverly balanced serious items, virtuoso pieces and comic turns chiefly by Victor Borge, who got his arms and legs entangled with his partner Martin Goldstein in his riotous version of Liszt's Second Hungarian Rhapsody.

However, the pièce de résis-tance among the fun numbers was the appearance of Gina Bachauer, usually a rather grand figure, and the diminutive Alicia de Larrocha as two pigtalled schoolgirls to play "Das Drey-blatt" (The Trefoll) by W.F.E. HAMBURG: Friedrich Puts Nev Life in 'Marriage of Figaro

HAMBURG (IHT).—Götz Friedrich's new production of Mozari comic masterpiece. "The Marriage of Figaro." exemplifies ti-qualities of realistic music-theater that have put the stage director such demand.

The opera comes theatrically to vivid life. Such a work as thi which consists largely, at times maddeningly, of almost endless repet tions of the sequence entrance-recitative-aria-exit, requires a master touch and an endless fount of ideas.

The curtain calls typify Friedrich's supply of ideas which ark quite logically and organically from the material. At the end, a wee ding joyously takes place; curtain. The curtain then rises to disclos the bridal pair in a passionate clinch. They break decorously a liveried lackeys bring onto the stage food and wine appropriate to th occasion, followed by all the hungry guests. With music-master Basilia ticking off a protocol list, the guests, singly or in groups, hardly interrupting their sipping and nibbling, come briefly to the apron to acknowledge the (rapturous) applause, then return eagerly to the festivities. These curtain calls don't follow the opera, they extend it and in a captivating way.

Friedrich's attention to musical-theatrical details at times give rise to an apt application of what Hollywood movie composers cal Mickey-Mousing. For instance, at the end of Bartolo's first recitative he synchronizes the final dominant and tonic chords with two appropriate pinches of snuff, one into each nostril. The subsequent delayer sneeze also comes at exactly the right musical moment.

Not that Friedrich alone has stolen this show. Gary Bertin achieved a limpid clarity from the orchestra, which one hears rarely Judith Beckmann as the counters and Justino Diaz as Figaro stoppe a button and sings and acts with true temperament. Hanna Schwarz a mezzo with a rich but flexible voice, brought to life a fetching, snut nosed, gawky Cherubino of exceptional excellence. Bernd Weikl, as th. count, seemed much more Viennese than Spanish, but he displayed at admirable, well used voice. Peter Haage (Basilio), Kurt Moll (Bat. tolo), and Carol Wyatt (Marcellina) also deserve special mention an praise. Toni Businger got booed for his sets and costumes-unfairly parody seeks to give the oldtime Western the hot seat would be an understatement. It seems more like an attempt to finish it off forever. But the Western is longlived. It antedates the movies which took over such corn-ball stage favorites as "Salomy Jane," "The Cowboy and the Lady."

"Girl of the Golden West." Today on tele-ision, the Western is relished as it has been relished since Civil War times. However, Brooks with his free-wheeling onslaught has cleared the motion picture screen for the time being of endlessly repeated clichés.

Brooks is known here for "The Producers," a hilarious spoof of Broadway chicanery in which Zero Mostel plated a scheming manager who oversells shares in a show he is assured will flop. When it becomes a hit, he goes to jail. Brooks is a film-maker of vigor and bright comic notions,

U.S. Gallery Halts Press Show At China Demand

Pound Hits Low on Arab Report

LONDON, Dec. 10. - Sterling declined to a record low against other currencies today although the Bank of England spent an estimated $250 million to support

The main influence was a report that Arabian American Oil Co. (Aramco) has been told by Saudi Arabia to use dollars all future oil settlements and tax purposes, dropping sterling completely as a settlement currency. At present, sterling is used for slightly less than 25 per cent of the Aramco payments.

Late today Exxon Corp., one of the owners of Aramco, confirmed the report,

In addition to the report concerning Aramco, banking sources 11 London said the oil-producing states are apparently no longer investing large amounts in sterling because of concern that Britain's high inflation rate will erode the purchasing power of

Until November, the oil-produc-ing states had been investing considerable sums in sterling each month. Though the exact amount cannot be determined. Treasury and Bank of England data suggest the amount ranged between a low of £175 million in January and a high of £350 million in July.

However, the amount of money invested in sterling in November appears to have dropped very sharply to between zero and £50 million, apart from a previously arranged £170-million loan from Iran.

Inflation Rate Cited

One of the reasons cited by bankers for oil-producers avoiding sterling was the prospect of a very high rate of inflation in Britain next year.

The National Institute for Economic and Social Research, an independent and respected organization, has predicted retail prices will increase 20 to 25 per cent next year. A recent report by Rothschild Intercontinental Bank forecasts a higher rate of 25 to 30 per cent.

For example, if an investor started buying U.K. Treasury bills in October 1973, rolled them over each quarter in January, April and July, the rate of consumer price increases would be higher than the nominal return of the bills by 3.9 per cent.

The same procedure shows the negative yield for U.S. Treasury bills came to about 3 per cent in the period, indicating that there has not been much difference between the two types of investment. However, the pattern should change drastically next year because the U.S. inflation rate is expected to range between and 12 per cent.

Senate Votes Anti-Trust Bill Making Violations a Felony

-Legislation making criminal violations of the anti-trust laws a felony, punishable by fall sentences of up to three years, was passed by the Senate yesterday.

The action appeared to assure passage of the legislation this year since the House, which had passed its own version is reported ready to accept the Senate's measure and President Ford is certain to sign it.

Making a felony of criminal anti-trust violations—a category that includes agreements between alleged competitors to sell at the same prices or not to sell in each other's territories—is a move that would strip convicted violators of basic citizenship rights, including the right to vote, in most states. Thus, the legislation is expected by its advocates to provide a strong deterrent to price-fixing and other such crimes. At pres ent, the maximum penalty is one year, but the penalty most commonly imposed is 30 days, if that.

The maximum fine would be increased from the present maximum of $50,000, which applies to either individual corporate officials or the corporation itself, to $500,000 for individuals and $1 million for corporations.

The bill provides that all contacts between government officials and company officials be reported publicly, except those between the company's lawyer £20 to £480.

The Senate accepted the House version of all sections of the bill except the one on the procedure by which anti-trust cases reach the Supreme Court. It insisted on its own version, which would permit both the government and the company involved to ask the trial judge to permit an appeal to the Supreme Court. The House bill would have permitted only the government to do this.

House leaders are reportedly willing to accept the Senate version in the interest of getting the bill passed this year.

French Deficit In Payments

PARIS, Dec. 10 (Reuters).— France's first-half balance of payments deficit was 17.26 billion francs, compared with a revised shortfall of 3.002 billion francs for the whole of 1973, the Finance Ministry said today.

The Finance Ministry said the current-account deficit has been largely financed by an inflow of 6.923 billion francs in long-term capital through foreign borrowings by residents and also by an inflow of short-term capital amounting to 7.913 billion francs. The gloomy outlook could be even worse if poor weather curtails the harvest for the second consecutive year, department economist Dawson Ahalt told the National Agricultural Outlook conference

This year's food prices are run-ning about 15 per cent above last year, when a record year-to-year jump occurred. Mr. Ahalt pro-jected further rises at an annual rate of 15 per cent until next

He told a reporter before his speech that an extraordinarily good harvest of U.S. crops next summer and fall could pull the final 1975 overall rise down sharply to an average closer to 10 per cent. But that would require drastic price reductions in the last three months of the year.

More Acres Farmed

Earlier Kyle Randall, chairman of the department's outlook and situation board, said that farmers expect to cultivate 12 million to 16 million more acres next year, almost two-thirds of it in corn and other feed grains that are vi-tal for production of meat, poultry and dairy products.

Mr. Ahalt said that American capita food consumption reached a record high this year, despite the higher prices that boosted the portion of income spent on food to an estimated 15.3 per cent of take-home pay on a national average, highest since 1968. Unlike the 1973 performance, however, when all of the increase was due to higher food prices, part of this year's spending put more food on consumers' tables," as eating habits shifted from expensive meat to more direct crop-related foods, Mr. Ahalt "I don't think that's going to happen again. Consumption is going to slip a little next year." economist said before his speech.

Eleven percent of all U.S. energy supplies are used to keep the U.S. fed. Our Vickers Energy is an important part of the Esmark effort to insure that food will continue to be the consumer's best bargain. For every calorie that reaches the table another nine units of energy are expended for fertilizer, farm machinery, fuel for farm vehicles, delivery trucks, rail transportation, energy for irrigation, food processing. packaging and cooking.

Our wholly owned Vickers Energy is involved in the exploration, production, refining and marketing of petroleum. Through an 87% ownership of TransOcean Oil, Inc., we hold oil leases in Canada, producing oil and natural gas wells off the Texas and Louisiana coasts, plus interests in the North Sea.

But Vickers is only one of the Esmark subholding companies that represent many areas of growth potential in the critical area of petroleum and protein.

Swift's edible oils are derived mainly from the soybean, correctly called the miracle crop and a major source of protein. Edible oils and other soybean by-products are used in an increasing number of food products worldwide. We are now the fifth largest processor of soybeans in the U.S. and our capacity will be increased by more than 20% to help meet worldwide protein demand.

Swift & Company has worked to lower the cost to the consumer of all its protein products and takes pride in the fact the American family spends 17% of disposable income on food vs. 25% in the UK, 35% in France, 55% in Russia and 60-70% in Southeast Asia and India.

BETWEEN ME AND LIFE: A BIOGRAPHY OF ROMAINE BROOKS

By Meryle Secrest. Doubleday. 432 pp. Illustrated. $12.50

Reviewed by Anais Nin

IN this biography of a highly I gifted but little known woman artist, Meryle Secrest combines lucid psychological insight with empathy in a deep exploration of character and relationships She brings into vivid life a lost segment of art history. She has the skill and power to recreate history in shimmering colors. It is unusual when a study of character probes so deeply within a human being and still paints the atmosphere around it, the life of the times.

The book is fascinating for many reasons. American-born Romaine Goddard Brooks, who died in 1970 at the age of 96, endured a nightmare childhood which would have stunted and distorted anyone else. The artist developed in spite of it. Even if, in her own words, this childhood stood "between her and life"-like an invisible fog. cooling the temperature of her loves or preventing the fullest expansion of her genius even interfering with the life impulse -nevertheless, compared to the stunted lives of many modern artists today, she was involved in a rich colorful pattern of friendships and loves with many remarkable figures of her time. The history of Natalie Barney, the American heiress, in itself was fruitful, and had as many repercussions as the central theme of lesbian love which united her to Romaine Brooks. They were both talented, independent women who formed their own patterns of life and behavior. The fullness and many dimensions of their relationship created an intense suspense. What enhances our interest in the story of Romaine Brooks is the close, intimate view we get of her remarkable friends—the illusion of living at that time and taking part in achievements and the despair they experience.

Robert de Montesquiou, the eccentric poet, art critic and leader of society who had inspired Proust's Baron de Charlus, admired and befriended her and called her a "Thief of Souls" because he felt that in her portraits she captured and revealed the secret, sorrowful self concealed behind the persons. Apollinaire found too much sadness and austerity in her work. Secrest suggests Romaine Brooks may have projected her own tragic imprint upon others, or it may be that her tragic life revealed to her more readily the carefully hidden scars in others.

Solution to Previous Puzzle

Jean Cocteau, Paul Morar Ida Rubinstein and D'Annum posed for her. She was at rounded all her life by signicant figures, Somerset Man ham, Axel Munthe, Gertra Stein, Ezra Pound, André Gi Colette, Compton Mackenzie, 8 attempted one marriage with homosexual on the assumption they could be companions b live out their own preference. It lasted barely a year.

The quest for love and fulfillment as an artist are book's major themes. As an issue is the received admiration is recognition from the most of the quest for love, what Romes Brooks wanted, says Secrest, what she never had, a mother all-accepting love. Secrest questions of the control of the contro incest with the mother is inder the very essence of lesbianism To my mind that is a limit concept, and any quest for lowinght be said to be a substitu for the one not given at the beginning of one's life. Seen reminds us that Dante had special nook in his inferno the parents who did not to their children. In the case I Romaine Brooks, the injury w compounded by the obsession love of the mother for the so adding to Brooks's conviction that she should deny her fem ninity.

Romaine Brooks's painting were exhibited for the first tin in America in 1971, the yes after she died in obscurity Nice. Secrest writes: "In di scribing the life of an artist on can consider the work as its ow phenomenon, separate from the life, or find its origin in th particular psychic set of the artist. The work of Romain Brooks cannot be separated from her life."

She is one of the extraord nary women recently rescue from oblivion. This might is attributed to women's increasi awareness of the need to rewrite the history of woman, o to the more mysterious cause; which often obscures the work of an artist until our taste, our discernment, our comprehension. has caught up with it, explaining the cycles of eclipses, and the cycles when an artist long dead becomes a vital part of our modern consciousness. Today we understand much better the excruciating relationship of Romaine Brooks to her insand mother. We understand the multiple and diverse expression of love, the obstacles and complexities attending the develop ment of a woman artist.

This biography, in which the history of painting, of mores, e places, of people is harmonioush interwoven, and following the Ariadne thread of one life deep! enough, will allow us to discove many lives and imperishable depths of experience.

Readers who fall to understand the bidding shown in the diagram are likely to form one of two ertheories. They might guess that North-South had a part-score, or that North had been barred from the bidding by some technical misdemeanor.

The truth is that although the game was bridge, it was not contract bridge. It was played 70 years ago, and was reported by Joseph B. Elwell, the authority on "bridge" as it was then played.

The scoring in those days was quite different. As now nine tricks in no-trump made a game, and so did 10 tricks in hearts, or 11 tricks in diamonds. But the black suits counted for very little, and were rarely bid. All the bidding was by the dealer's side. The dealer would usually bid notrump or hearts, without speci-fying any number of tricks. The alternative was to pass, and let partner make the selection.

In the diagramed deal, therefore, the opening action by South was not one no-trump, but "notrump." North had no say in the matter, and would not have wished to bid the low-making spade suit even if he could.

It was not necessary to bid to the limit of the hands, since you scored toward game whatever you made. So South's task was obviously to make nine tricks, and the modern reader can imagine that he is playing three no-trump.

"Fourth-best" was normal practice in those days, and indeed earlier in the days of whist, West put the heart seven on the table. and South had a straightforward problem. If West held the spade king South was safe, but if East had that card there was a clear danger of losing four or five hear tricks as well as the spade king. If West held five hearts heads by the ace, there was nothing be done. But South could a something about a six-two hear split, and did so. He played lot from dummy, and allowed East ten to win

East continued roughely wit a heart, but West's heart length was now useless. When East gained the lead later with the spade king he had no more hear to play and South made 10 trick without difficulty.

Elwell failed to note in his book that East should have countered the ducking play by shifting to diamond and establishing the setting tricks in that suit. could work out that South mus have K-x-x of hearts, since n other holding would account in the play: the declarer would have played the queen from dummy his own holding was A-x-x of 9-x-x, and would have won the trick with other holdings.

Oklahoma: The Invincible Outlaws

By Dave Anderson

NEW YORK, Dec. 10 (NYT).-He didn't look like an outlaw. He had on a dark brown sports jacket and a dark brown tie with tiny white polka dots.

"Outlaws," said Randy Hughes with annoyance in his voice. People associate Oklahoma University with outlaws."
Randy Hughes is a 6-foot-4-inch

205-pound all-America safetyman for Oklahoma, but he has a mind as well as a body. He was honored tonight by the National Football Foundation and Hall of Fame as one of its scholar-athletes this season. He has a 3.7 grade average as a finance major. He is taking two real estate courses, an investment course and an insurance course. He also is taking a course in popular music but perhaps that's to soothe his annoyance at being deprived of the glory he believes his team has

Throughout the college football season, Oklahoma plundered the badlands. Unbeaten and untied in 11 games, the Sooners often were unmerciful—72-3 over Utah State, 63-0 over Wake Forest, 63-0 over Kansas State, 40-14 over Colorado State, 37-0 over Missouri. 44-13 over Oklahoma State, 45-14 over Nebraska. They also burned and looted Baylor, Texas and Iowa State in ascending to the No. 1 ranking in the current Associated Press poll that determines one version of the national championship. Incilgible

Oklahoma's ranking in the final poll, tabulated after the bowl games, will depend on Alabama's credentials following its Orange Bowl date with Notre Dame on New Year's night. But because of its probation by the National Collegiate Athletic Association for recruitment violations, Oklahoma was ineligible for a bowl game and ineligible to appear on national TV during the season. It also is ineligible for the MacArthur bowl, awarded by the National Football Foundation and Hall of Fame to the nation's outstanding team. There is no quarrel that the Oklahoma athletic administration deserved punishment for its violations. The shame is that the athletes also are punished. "I don't have a solution. I don't know if there is one. Hughes said. "But it's not fair to the players. You're only got three years. I came to Oklahoma to play in bowl games and to play on a national championship team. Punishing the players is the worst thing possible. Recruiting practices are illegal just about everywhere. I was recruited heavily by 30 major colleges. I was offered illegal inducements by almost every college that talk-ed to me. I had alumni take me out to dinner and says, 'Here's $50 and there's more where that came from. "I had people offer me clothes and easy summer jobs. One college told me I'd have a job where I'd make $4,000 just for sitting in an office for seven weeks. Oklahoma offered me a summer job too but I worked at it. I worked for a builder in Tulsa, doing odd jobs the first two summers. Then I was a landscape foreman. I made $4 an hour but worked sometimes as much as 15 hours overtime a week. made $2,800 last summer at it.

Nobody at Oklahoma gave me a car. I was able to buy my own car with what I made at my summer job." five times in the last 13 years by the NCAA for violations. Its agents must be too obvious.

"But it's pretty well known that Texas and Colorado got us this time," Hughes said. "The coaches that we compete against in our own area were tired of being beaten in games, tired of being beaten in recruiting the best players. They wanted to tear our program down. And then the UPI poil, where the coaches vote, disqualified us. It was pretty obvious the coaches were after us when one week they had California ranked 17th, but California was on probation, too. When they realized it, they had to drop California too "Even the AP poll. We were No. 1 in the pre-season poll. But even though we best Baylor in our opener, 28-11, we dropped to third behind Notre Dame and Ohio State, and we weren't No. 1 again until after Ohio State lost to Michigan State a few weeks ago. It's so political. We were told that some people who were giving first-place votes to Alabama weren't even putting us in the top ten to cut down our point total My three years, we had 31 wins, one loss and one tie. But hardly anybody realizes we were that Not on TV

That's because Oklahoma has that outlaw image. They are so bad they're not even permitted to be seen on TV, like an X-rated

"If we could've gone to a bowl game this year, it probably could've been the Orange Bowl against Alabama because Bear Bryant couldn't avoid us this time. He avoided us two years ago in the Sugar Bowl and he went to the Cotton Bowl, trying to protect his national championship. If he avoided us again, it'd probably cost him the national title."

In an atmosphere of polls and bowls, many critics of college athletics believe that football is overemphasized_ Not me," Randy Hughes said.

"I don't think sports can be emphasized enough. You learn discipline. You learn what competition is. You learn that in a Especially when you're victimized by NCAA probation.

Confident Ajax Faces Juventus in Cup Play

By Brian Glanville

match of the day in the UEFA Cup third round tomorrow is unquestionably the return between Ajax and Juventus, in Amsterdam: a sort of watered-down version of the 1973 European Cup final in Belgrade,

A goal by its lively new right winger Damiani gave Juventus victory in Turin, but if Ajax gets back its chief scorer, Geels, as it hopes, then it should be a very different ball game. Not that Ajax is remotely the team it was when it beat Juventus in Belgrade; or even the team it was last season. Not only Johan Cruyff has gone but Johan Neeskens, too. And Willy Bro-kamp, the center-forward bought this season from Maastricht, is ineligible for UEFA Cup ties.

Ajax players are confident of success. They are playing at home; and they feel that had their West German sweeper, Horst Blankenburg, the man whose left wing center made their winning goal in Belgrade, not been in-jured and taken off, things would have gone better in Turin. The Italians themselves are cauthous, remembering what happened last season when Ajax, even without Cruyff, overwhelmed Milan, 6-0, in the second leg of the so-called Supper Cup-winners of the European Cup against winners of the European Cupwinners' Cup-after losing by one goal at San

Altafini Dangerous

Juventus continues to do well in the Italian championship without really impressing anybody. Its 1-0 victory over Inter, in San Siro, was a valuable one. And Jose Altafini, at 36, continues to be immensely daugerous. Ajax will have to watch him closely; his burst of speed remains astonishingly unaltered. There will be another keen game, though not too keen one hopes—in Yugoslavia, between Velez Mostar and England's sole survivors, Derby County. Derby won the first leg, 3-1, after bringing on two substitutes, Jeff Bourne and the hard-shooting winger Alan Hinton, who scored the goals that turned the tide. Nothing seems likely to stop

There seems no stopping Borussia Moenchengladbach, which so narrowly failed to win the UEFA final against Liverpool a couple of seasons ago. It has scored no fewer than 10 goals in the last two UEFA Cup games: five at Lyon, five at home to Real Zaragoza, whom it meets in the return tomorrow. The Danish international, Simonsen, has done well nmong the scorers, as has the German World Cup star Ramer Bonhof, still suspended in the Bundesliga, but able to play UEFA Cup games.

PARIS, Dec. 10 (AP) .- France's Matra auto-racing team announced today that it was abandoning racing after nine years in which it won the world Grand Prix and sportscar championships and three victories in the Le Mans 24-Hours race. Jean-Luc Lagardere, managing director of Matra, cited economic

Ali Announces a New Goal

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10 (AP).—World heavyweight boxing champion Muhammad Ali called at the White House today and told President Ford he is after his job.

All, who regained the title from George Foremen in Zaire two months ago, was ushered into Ford's Oval Office after being given a VIP tour of the White House. Dressed in brown suit and white shirt, All was more subdued than in most public appearances as he posed for pictures with Ford. The setting obviously had an impact on the champion, however, as he grinned at the President and said: "You made a hig mistake in letting me come because now I'm going after Ford grinned back and responded: "It's a great challenge. I enjoy the problems. Now we're going to get some solutions." A few days before his knockout of Foreman, Ali had com-

"Why doesn't President Ford invite me to the White House? Look at all the good I can do America. But nobody invites me to the White House."

Yesterday, Ali was cheered by crowds during a motorcade in his honor in New York City. When Mayor Abe Beame told him he had always been a champion in the city, Ali replied: "The royal treatment I'm getting makes me feel like the first black president of the United States."

Congress and Rocky

By Russell Baker

Thunderous Futility Award for 1974 will doubtless go to the two congressional committees that spent months investigating Nelson Rockefeller and discovered that he comes from a very rich family. This is reminiscent of Molière's social climber who went in for learning in middle life and was delighted to discover that he spoke prose.

The distaste that the congressmen professed for Rockefeller's habit of spending his riches to get elected was not persuasive. This year the public expects congressmen to be shocked by the fact that campaigns need rich men to pay for them, although every congressman has always known it. What was genuinely shocking to them was not that he spent his money to attain public office, but that he also gave it away for no self-serving purpose at

Baker

And so they extracted a pledge that he would not do it any more. Thus when he becomes vice-president, the one congressional dictate by which he must abide is to cease giving people money.

Rockefeller becomes the first millionaire in history to be made a tightwad by act of Congress.

This suspicion of men who give money away runs deep among congressmen. They are constantly harassing the private foundations about whom they give money to and what for.

If money is to be given away, Congress wants to do the giving: if anybody else has money to pass around, Congress wants to relieve him of it and do the giving for him, although not usually to the people or projects of his choice. The trouble is that Congress is not a very efficient giver. Suppose Rockefeller had had to use Congress as an agent to pass the famous $500,000 to William Ronan. It is doubtful that Ronan would ever have seen a cent. Out of the half-million, they would have had to hire tax collectors to pick up the money from Rockefeller, printers to

NEW YORK (NYT).—The produce the forms requisite to the collection, clerks to process the forms and other clerks to put them in file cabinets, which would also have to be paid for from the $500,000. A share of the money would have had to be spent to pay for meetings of both houses of Congress (salaries, heat and light bills, printing costs, dusting and brass polishing, doorkeepers, spittoon cleaning, etc.) and preliminary meetings of congressional committees.

An agency—the Federal Ronan Relief Administration perhaps— would have had to be set up (a building, administration, lobbyists, civil servants, typewriters, vending machines, automobiles). New forms in quadruplicate would have had to be created, on which Ronan could make application, submit certification and explain his business, family life and intentions for use of the money. Lawyers would have had to be hired to examine the completed documents for compliance with the will of Congress. Most likely, of course, Congress, after collecting the $500,000 from Rockefeller would regard Ronan as not a very pressing national obligation. Seventy per cent of the $500,000 would almost surely be diverted to the Pentagon to reduce a cost overrun on military file cabinets, and 25 per cent would be allocated to social services in order to quiet the lobbies who are always asking why the Pentagon always gets all the money. The remaining 5 per cent would not suffice to pay the costs of the new Federal Ronan Relief Administration. Thus, not only would Ronan be left without a cent. but Congress would also have to raise taxes to cover the deficit,

In the end, Rockefeller's money would have been used up to pay the government to give it away for him, and both he and Ronan would have to pay increased taxes to help the government not get any of the original sum from Rockefeller to Ronan.

Absurd? Yes, and it is the way government works. It is no wonder the congressmen were shocked to find Rockefeller simply giving it away. A precedent like that, if allowed to stand, could wipe out the government.

From the Bettmann Archive comes this picture of Cornelius Vanderbilt fr. and his sister Gladys who were among "the few."

Good Old Days-'Pure Bunk'

By Terry Ryan

NEW YORK (AP).—The good old days were . . . terrible, says Otto Bettmann. social historian and founder of the Bettmann Archive.

With illustrations from the archive's collection of old prints and photographs to make his points, Bettmann argues in a new book that nostalgia has warped the popular view of America's past.

Among other things, he notes:

There were three million horses in U.S. cities at the turn of the century. The 15,000 horses in Rochester, N.Y., produced enough manure in a year to cover an acre of ground with a layer 175 feet deep. • In 1890, the police commissioner of New York said there were 40,000 prostitutes in the city.

• In 1882, the designer of New York's Central Park recommended its closing after dark because of crime.

• New York State Assemblyman Teridy Roosevelt branded as "communistic" the demand of streetcar drivers for a 12-hour work day. They were working 16-hour days for $12 a week.

• In the 1880s, close to 40 per cent of U.S. farmers owned neither house nor land. They were tenant farmers. About 50 per cent of the income of city families went

 On Feb. 22, 1898, F.B. Baker, a black man, was lynched at Lake City, S.C. He had accepted the job of postmaster. • Only 20 per cent of the students in the teacher-training schools of the 1890s had high school diplomas. In 1903, only 18 cities in the United States had public playgrounds of any sort. In 1905, a public health engineer in Glasgow coined the word "smog" to describe the condition of "It is a mechanism of our psyche to forget all the bad things that happened in the old days," said Bettmann. "We look at the little trimmings of the time, but not the essential cruelties and hardships." Bettmann, 71, was born in Germany and received his doctorate from the University of Leipzig after majoring in art and social history. He came to the United States in 1935 with two steamer trunks full of old pictures. There are now three million items in the archive's picture library, including a substantial collection of old-time

His book deals with what has been called America's Gilded Age, the era from the end of the Civil War to the beginning of World War L It is titled, "The Good Old Days—They were Terrible!"

It is, Bettmann said, "a personal attempt to redeem our times from the aspersions cast upon them by nostalgic comparisons." The Gay Nineties were gay, Bettmann said, but only for the privileged few. It was also a time, he said, when a sweatshop seamstress made $7 for an 84-hour week, when locusts obliterated the entire harvest of the Dakotas in a single day, and when thousands of families lived in tarpaper boxes on the Pennsylvania coal-fields.

Bettmann noted that children then made up one-third of the labor force in mills, heroin was sold as cough medicine and teaching jobs in Philadelphia were secured by payment of $120 to the local political bosses.

"But we always measure our own times against the higher class which lived very beautifully," Bettmann said. "It is all promoted by the nostalgia industry. As istory, nostalgia is pure bunk."

By measuring the present against a glorified image of the past, he said, we cause our own times to appear much worse than they are. "Even if we cast but a cursory glance at the not so good old days and bring them into alignment with our own, we will find much to be grateful

For almost every complaint of today, Bettmann offers anecdotes and statistics to show how much worse things were in the good old days. The message is carried visually by old magazine and book illustrations, political cartoons and early photo-

If teachers complain now of unruly students, they might consider the fate of Etta Barstow, a schoolteacher in Canton, Mass. She kept four boys after school on Oct. 8, 1870. They stoned her to death. If youth gangs are a problem now in some cities, they were then also. New York had the Gophers, the Molasses Gang and the Bowery Boys.

If traffic is a hazard now, consider the report of the U.S. National Safety Council: The horse-associated fatality rate of the last century was 10 times as great as the motor vehicle fatality rate of modern

"We are, in a way, a little spoiled now." Bettmann said. "In the olden days, people did not expect much. They thought hardship was part of life. Now people want everything absolutely perfect, pamless and

Freed From Prison PEOPLE: -After 66 Years

Johnson Vandyke Grigsby left the Indiana State Prison Monday after setting what may be a record for imprisonment—66 years. "I feel like I've just been born," said Grigsby, "I'm going out so glad." He is not sure of his birthday but says he is 89 or 90. He began serving a life sentence on Aug. 5, 1908, after being found guilty of second-degree murder in a saloon fight. The Guinness Book of Records lists Richard Honeck, sentenced in 1899 and released in 1963, as having been in prison longer than anyone else _64 years. A prison organization. is trying to get Grigsby recognized as the record holder.

"We Kiss Every Stone in Odessa" was the headline. The story was about Annets and Josif Shklyar-it appeared in the Sovietskaya Rossiya newspaper Tuesday. They told how they had fled to the United States, the "alien world," to return to the Soviet Union, after only three months. It was the first time in recent years, according to the Associated Press, that the Soviet press had published a story involving people who had returned to the Soviet Union after emigrating to the United States. The U.S. Embassy in Moscow has a record of the Shklyars re-ceiving visas on Aug. 27 to join an aunt, listed as Julia Coopersmith of Narberia Pa. The newspaper characterized the Shklyars relatives "rather rich" with a suburbit thome and several cars. Both is Shklyars went to work only to find, they said, that "in the United States everyone lives by oneself and for oneself. Everything, even relations between people, is decided by money." Deciding to return home, the couple wrote to the Soviet Embassy in Washington, and without waiting for an answer, took a flight back to Mos-When they came down the ramp, the Shklyars told frontier guards, "Detain us, we fled from the United States and came to the Soviet Union illegally."

When Arthur Reed finally quit his job at the foundry this year it wasn't his fault. Pig Iron Arthur," as he's known at the Oakland (Calif.) Phoenix Iron Works, was hospitalized about the time of his last birthday (in June) and has now been forced to retire. At age 114.
